

Greetings,

June 2023

New Road Missions (who is running The Fold) operates in rural, forgotten areas of South Africa with some of the highest poverty conditions. The kids in these communities suffer from unthinkable neglect and abuse. While public schools in South Africa have their challenges, they do provide education, discipline, structure, and safety. But when school is not in session, kids are vulnerable to abuse, mal-nutrition, and dangerous temptation. That's why they host summer camps where kids can experience love, fun, and the hope of Jesus!

These camps are the best week of the summer for them - focusing on Jesus, fun, spiritual growth, and leadership development. With the help of adult and student leaders, kids fall in love with God, build memories, and are filled with hope. This year they're preparing to serve over 500 kids and youth at their camps – more than we've ever had before! And they need your support.

Send a child to a full week of our day camp for ONLY $50.

Four of The Fold teenagers, Tebogo, Thapelo, Sello and Keith are attending training with other youth. They'll be helping as leaders for the small groups of children that will be attending the upcoming camps. The first day of training camp was amazing and included a bunch of individuals from the United States, who came to volunteer. Read the blog for their first day:

The garden at The Fold is not doing great, for multiple reasons. The company that used to donate hundreds of seedlings, went out of business and Jody has been unable to find a new source. Growing vegetables from seeds is very hard. Since the electricity isn't working for multiple hours each day, the electric fence around the garden doesn't work. The monkeys have discovered this, and are helping themselves to whatever they find. (for some reason they don't eat the hot peppers) We even found a baby warthog that had gotten in under the fence. On a good note, the citrus trees that were planted years ago, have finally started producing fruit. That part of the garden looks really good.

Update on the physical science kit ($3700). We now have $1665 to put toward the kit and there is a small fund-raising event planned for July which will also go toward the remaining science kit. We'll let you know how that goes.

God bless,

Paul and Micky Prince
